When I was making a study of the influence of the Spanish Falange in Latin America and tracing its Axis connections I wondered why there was so little material available to me in the State Dept. where I then worked as an intelligence analyst. When I obtained some of my files under PA it turned out that the Peurifoys and I presume Otepkas and their kind had me cut off from all classified material it now appears in the basic belief that I, not the Axis or Falange, presented a "national security" danger. ...I am sure this story is far from the full story and that those in the military and just starting CIA wanted the formerly enemy types to grow and prosper, as did the Peurifoys, so that they could become the great and good friends of the US who would, naturally, be more secure with them controlling formerly democratic lands, like Guatemala. Where Peurifoy's wildness killed him.
